Title: POST-CONVICTION DNA TESTING AND WRONGFUL CONVICTION (Electronic Document) --2012.

Source: URBAN INSTITUTE

Pages: 70

Subject: 1. EVIDENCE. 2. GENETICS.

Notes: "Forensic evidence, particularly fingerprints, has been used for more than a century to aid law enforcement investigations. However, only in the past decade has the use of deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) testing to include or eliminate suspects and exonerate those convicted in serious crimes become relatively common. DNA evidence is said to be individualizing because of its power to link a person to a criminal incident. And unlike fingerprints, the probability that questioned evidence from a crime scene matches DNA from a known person can be calculated. In past decades, the investigation of serious crimes that led to a conviction typically did not use individualizing forensic biological evidence such as DNA. Thus, it is possible that some individuals convicted in serious person crimes (sexual assault and homicide) would have been eliminated by a forensic analysis more discriminating than what was available at the time. To estimate the rate of such possible wrongful convictions and to identify their predictors, the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) in the U.S. Department of Justice funded retrospective DNA testing of physical evidence in cases where there was a conviction of a sexual assault or homicide and physical evidence was retained."

Two states participated: Arizona and Virginia.

Notes: "We propose moving away from the dichotomy between 'need-based' and 'merit-based' aid and instead designing programs that integrate targeting of students with financial need with appropriate expectations and support for college success. Specifically, we recommend that states:

1. Focus resources on students whose chances of enrolling and succeeding in college will be most improved by the receipt of state support.
2. Consolidate and simplify programs in order to make them easily understood by prospective college students and their families.
3. Design programs so that they not only help students gain access to college but also encourage success after they arrive."

Title: GOING THE DISTANCE IN ADULT COLLEGE COMPLETION : Lessons from the Non-Traditional No More Project (Electronic Document) --2012.

Source: WESTERN INTERSTATE COMMISSION FOR HIGHER EDUCATION (WICHE)

Pages: 72

Subject: 1. UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES--STUDENTS.

Notes: Report "summarizes the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education's efforts to improve policies and practices aimed at increasing adult degree completion in select states. From 2008 to 2011, WICHE worked with Arkansas, Colorado, Nevada, New Jersey, North Dakota, and South Dakota to identify and eliminate barriers that keep adult learners with prior college credit from returning to postsecondary education and completing their degrees. Recommendations highlighted in the report include mining student record databases to identify former students who left higher education after earning a significant number of credits, getting strong buy-in from and fostering communication between state and institutional leaders, demonstrating success through policy audits and other forms of information and data collection, and conducting broad outreach campaigns to reach as many potential students as possible. The report further recommends having a single point of contact for returning adults to help guide them through the readmission process and being flexible enough to adjust policies and practices to meet the different needs of adult students." Title: GRAPEVINE : An annual compilation of data on state fiscal support for higher education (Website)

Source: CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF EDUCATION POLICY, ILLINOIS STATE UNIVERSITY

Subject: 1. EDUCATION--FINANCES. 2. STATISTICS. 3. TAXES AND TAXATION. 4. UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES--FINANCES.

Notes: "Since 1960, Grapevine has published annual compilations of data on state tax support for higher education, including general fund appropriations for universities, colleges, community colleges, and state higher education agencies. Each year's Grapevine survey has asked states for tax appropriations data for the new fiscal year and for revisions (if any) to data reported in previous years.

As of fiscal year 2010, Grapevine tables--including both tax and non-tax support--have been produced by Illinois State University's Center for the Study of Education Policy in cooperation with the State Higher Education Executive Officers (SHEEO). The Grapevine survey has been consolidated with the annual survey used by SHEEO in its State Higher Education Finance (SHEF) project (<http://www.sheeo.org/finance/shef-home.htm>). This consolidated questionnaire asks for data that are compiled in a new State Support for Higher Education database. This database, in turn, is used to produce both the annual Grapevine tables, which provide a first look at state appropriations for the new fiscal year, and the annual SHEF report, which offers a more complete examination of trends in total state support for higher education, factoring in inflation and enrollment."

It provides relevant information, case stories of good practice, key questions and hands-on exercises for leadership teams to complete together. Regardless of your state's timeline, the workbook offers state and district leaders the means to plan for the [Common Core State Standards (CCSS)] and then drive successful implementation."

Title: MAKING SUMMER COUNT : How summer programs can boost children's learning (Electronic Document) --2012.

Source: RAND CORPORATION

Pages: 119

Subject: 1. EDUCATION--EXTENDED YEAR.

Notes: "Despite long-term and ongoing efforts to close the achievement gap between disadvantaged and advantaged students, low-income students continue to perform at considerably lower levels than their higher-income peers in reading and mathematics. Research has shown that students' skills and knowledge often deteriorate during the summer months, with low-income students facing the largest losses. Instruction during the summer has the potential to stop these losses and propel students toward higher achievement. A review of the literature on summer learning loss and summer learning programs, coupled with data from ongoing programs offered by districts and private providers across the United States, demonstrates the potential of summer programs to improve achievement as well as the challenges in creating and maintaining such programs. School districts and summer programming providers can benefit from the existing research and lessons learned by other programs in terms of developing strategies to maximize program effectiveness and quality, student participation, and strategic partnerships and funding. Recommendations for providers and policymakers address ways to mitigate barriers by capitalizing on a range of funding sources, engaging in long-term planning to ensure adequate attendance and hiring, and demonstrating positive student outcomes."

It also serves as a starting point for analysis of potential changes in energy policies. But AEO2012 is not limited to the Reference case. It also includes 29 alternative cases (see Appendix E, Table E1), which explore important areas of uncertainty for markets, technologies, and policies in the U.S. energy economy. Many of the implications of the alternative cases are discussed in the 'Issues in focus' section of this report."

Title: ISOLATED CAPITAL CITIES, ACCOUNTABILITY AND CORRUPTION : Evidence from US states (Book) --2012.

Source: JOHN F. KENNEDY SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT, HARVARD UNIVERSITY

Pages: 58 Series: Faculty Research Working Paper Series

Subject: 1. ETHICS. 2. STATE GOVERNMENT.

Notes: "We show that isolated capital cities are robustly associated with greater levels of corruption across US states. In particular, this is the case when we use the variation induced by the exogenous location of a state's centroid to instrument for the concentration of population around the capital city. We then show that different mechanisms for holding state politicians accountable are also affected by the spatial distribution of population: newspapers provide greater coverage of state politics when their audiences are more concentrated around the capital, and voter turnout in state elections is greater in places that are closer to the capital. Consistent with lower accountability, there is also evidence that there is more money in state-level political campaigns in those states with isolated capitals. We find that the role of media accountability helps explain the connection between isolated capitals and corruption. In addition, we provide some evidence that this pattern is also associated with lower levels of public good spending and outcomes."
