[From the Associated Press]
April 15, 1947—Jackie Robinson played his first major league game, for the Dodgers. He went 0-for-3, but scored the deciding run in a 5-3 victory over the Boston Braves in Brooklyn. He was the first black to appear in the majors since 1884.

As we approach Passover, which starts on Saturday evening, April 23, I thought it appropriate to read something adapted from the opening of the Passover Seder, the festive meal that Jews celebrate together to open the holiday.

I would hold up some unleavened bread, or matzah, and say: This is the bread of our poverty, which our ancestors ate in the land of Egypt. Let all who are hungry come and eat. Let all who are in need come and celebrate with us. Now we are here—next year we hope to see redemption. Now we are slaves. Next year we will be free.

May it be the will of the universe, that just as the Israelites experienced freedom from the Egyptians, so may all of us find and give the relief of freedom from all kinds of oppression and distress. May all of us work to bring out communities from the narrow straits of difficulty to abundance, from darkness to light, and from enslavement to redemption, speedily in our days. May the model of Jackie Robinson remind us all that we each have a hand in the bringing of equality and justice to all, and let us say:

AMEN.

Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.
