As a veteran who's been away from loved ones, I know firsthand how much this isolation impacts people. As someone who already struggles with mental health, these phone and visit restrictions are making it worse. Not being able to hear from my husband or know if he's okay is taking a serious toll on me. My husband is also struggling, and losing our connection only makes it worse. Families need phone calls and visits to support their loved ones, this level of isolation is cruel and unnecessary. We need to lift the freeze on overtime for the prison system so they can fix this and ensure families stay connected.

Sincerely,

Sherlyn Gillette
