Title: ONLY YESTERDAY : The rise and fall of twentieth century sexual psychopath laws (Electronic Document) --2009.

Source: LOUISIANA LAW REVIEW

Pages: 43

Subject: 1. SEX OFFENDERS.

Notes: "This Article looks at the history of the sexual psychopath laws. Sexually violent predator laws are not the first wave of American legislation aimed at committing sex offenders to locked mental hospitals; they are the second. Preceding them by half a century were the sexual psychopath laws, which differed in significant detail but provided the same basic framework of indeterminacy and dangerousness. Like the sexually violent predator laws, the sexual psychopath laws were enacted in response to a few high profile sex crimes. Citizens across the United States were terrified that they were being engulfed by a wave of sex crimes, and politicians responded. Between 1937 and 1967, twenty-six states and the District of Columbia passed legislation calling for the indefinite civil commitment of so-called sexual psychopaths. By 1990—when the first sexually violent predator law was passed in the state of Washington—most of the sexual psychopath laws had fallen out of use or been overturned."

Title: HOW SMALL IS TOO SMALL? : An Analysis of School District Consolidation (Pamphlet) --2011.

Source: CALIFORNIA LEGISLATIVE ANALYST'S OFFICE (LAO)

Pages: 24

Subject: 1. EDUCATION--SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

Notes: "In this report, we investigate the competing claims made in support and opposition of combining smaller school districts into larger districts. We find some small districts' spending patterns and student performance differ slightly from larger districts, but very small districts have notable and troubling differences. We also find that substantial funding advantages and certain disincentives keep small districts from opting for consolidation. Our analysis suggests the state should not pursue a one-size-fits all approach for district configuration or require all small school districts to consolidate, but it does suggest the state should remove existing disincentives. To increase efficiencies and accountability, we also recommend the state increase the minimum size for districts to at least 100 students."

Subject: 1. COMMON INTEREST COMMUNITIES. 2. PLANNING AND ZONING.

Notes: "This article examines the critical and insufficiently understood role that government plays in the widespread and ever-growing establishment of private residential communities in the United States, particularly in the high-growth Sunbelt states. The author argues that local governments, on a broad scale and independent of market forces, effectively have required developers of new subdivisions to create community associations to operate and maintain the subdivision in lieu of the municipality providing traditionally municipal services to the subdivision, including such services as street maintenance, sewer service, water supply, drainage, curbside refuse collection, parks, and even traditional police patrols of public streets."
