Title: CAREER CLUSTERS : Forecasting demand for high school through college jobs 2008-2018 (Electronic Document) --2011.

Source: GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY CENTER ON EDUCATION AND THE WORKFORCE

Pages: 111

Subject: 1. EDUCATION. 2. EMPLOYMENT.

Notes: "This report presents data on job opportunities and skill requirements through 2018 arranged by the 16 career and technical education (CTE) career clusters in the Carl D. Perkins Act of 2006 (Perkins IV). These skill requirements reflect the length and extent of education and training required for the job. We detail changes in education requirements by cluster and show that the demand for postsecondary education will increase from 59 to 63 percent of all jobs by 2018. We identify the best clusters for those with only a high school diploma, some college/no degree, an Associate's degree, and a Bachelor's degree or better based on demand for and the earnings potential of occupations within those clusters."

Title: UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE TAXES : Options for program design and insolvent trust funds; businesses face higher taxes as states exhaust trust funds and incur interest payments (Electronic Document) --2011.

Source: TAX FOUNDATION

Pages: 32

Series: Background Paper, Number 61

Subject: 1. UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION.

Notes: "Conclusion ... At a time when the unemployment insurance [UI] system is exhausting its financial reserves, failing at its countercyclical objective, and imposing higher taxes on employers and greater fiscal pressure on the states, and a time when the public is skeptical of extending benefits without broader changes, it may be an opportune moment for significant UI system reform. The reforms could be modest, such as eliminating the firewall between administrative costs and benefits, reducing cross-subsidies through greater use of experience ratings, and relying more on face-to-face training and advising. The reforms could be major, such as adopting elements of state workers' compensation programs and experimenting with individual accounts to enhance saving."

Title: YEAR STATE BUSINESS TAX CLIMATE INDEX (Electronic Document)

Source: TAX FOUNDATION

Pages: 60

Series: Background Paper

Subject: 1. BUSINESS TAX.

Notes: Report compares "the states on 118 different variables in the five important areas of taxation (major business taxes, individual income taxes, sales taxes, unemployment insurance taxes, and property taxes) and then adding the results up to a final, overall ranking. This approach has the advantage of rewarding states on particularly strong aspects of their tax systems (or penalizing them on particularly weak aspects) while also measuring the general competitiveness of their overall tax systems. The result is a score that can be compared to other states' scores."

Nevada is ranked 3rd best

CRIMINAL JUSTICE/LEGAL SYSTEM

Title: JUVENILE ARRESTS 2009 (Electronic Document) --2011.

Source: OFFICE OF JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION (OJJDP)

Pages: 24

Series: Juvenile Justice Bulletin

Subject: 1. JUVENILE DELINQUENCY. 2. JUVENILE JUSTICE.

Notes: "This bulletin, which draws on data from the FBI's Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) program, summarizes crimes known to the police and juvenile arrests made during the 2009 reporting year. The authors use the UCR data to characterize the extent and nature of juvenile crime that comes to the attention of the justice system. This information also serves as a benchmark for juvenile justice professionals and other concerned citizens who wish to assess America's progress in reducing juvenile delinquency."

Title: RESIDENCE RESTRICTION LEGISLATION, SEX CRIME RATES, AND THE SPATIAL DISTRIBUTION OF SEX OFFENDER RESIDENCES (Book) --2011.

Source: UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY SCHOOL OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Pages: 190

Subject: 1. SEX OFFENDERS.

Notes: Dissertation submitted by Kelly M. Socia

"Residence restrictions are one of the most recent, and most controversial, public policies seeking to protect community members from registered sex offenders (RSOs) reentering society following incarceration. Residence restriction policies prohibit RSOs from living within a given distance of certain places where children might gather (e.g., schools, daycares, parks, and playgrounds). In doing so, the expectation is that RSOs will have a harder time finding and approaching young children whom they can sexually assault, thus driving sexual recidivism rates down. These policies, first passed in 1995 at the state level and in 2005 at the county and local level, have become extremely popular throughout the United States, but without proof that they are effective. To date, the research on these policies has been extremely limited, and has largely focused on the unintended consequences that these policies cause for RSOs, typically as a result of reduced housing options.

This study addresses this lack of research by examining four issues: 1) the characteristics of counties passing these policies, 2) the efficacy of county residence restrictions to reduce sex crime rates in New York State, 3) whether these policies are associated with the spatial distribution (i.e., clustering or dispersion) of RSO residences in upstate New York neighborhoods, and 4) whether this spatial distribution is in turn associated with differences in county-level recidivistic sex crime rates."

Title: ASSESSING THE COMPENSATION OF PUBLIC-SCHOOL TEACHERS : A report of the Heritage Center for Data Analysis (Electronic Document) --2011.

Source: HERITAGE FOUNDATION

Pages: 25

Subject: 1. COMPENSATION, WAGES AND HOURS. 2. EDUCATION--TEACHERS.

Notes: "We conclude that public-school teacher salaries are comparable to those paid to similarly skilled private-sector workers, but that more generous fringe benefits for public-school teachers, including greater job security, make total compensation 52 percent greater than fair market levels, equivalent to more than $120 billion overcharged to taxpayers each year. Teacher compensation could therefore be reduced with only minor effects on recruitment and retention. Alternatively, teachers who are more effective at raising student achievement might be hired at comparable cost."

Title: DO CHARTER SCHOOLS IMPROVE STUDENT ACHIEVEMENT? : Evidence from a national randomized study (Electronic Document) --2011.

Source: MATHEMATICA POLICY RESEARCH, INC.

Pages: 36

Series: Working Paper

Subject: 1. EDUCATION--ACHIEVEMENT. 2. EDUCATION--CHARTER SCHOOLS.

Notes: "This paper presents findings from the first national randomized study of the impacts of charter schools on student achievement, which included 36 charter middle schools across 15 states. The paper compares students who applied and were admitted to these schools through randomized admissions lotteries with students who applied and were not admitted. It finds that, on average, charter middle schools in the study were neither more nor less successful than traditional public schools in improving student achievement. However, impacts varied significantly across schools and students, with positive impacts for more disadvantaged schools and students and negative impacts for the more advantaged."

Title: EARLY CARE AND EDUCATION : State budget actions -- FY YEAR (Electronic Document) --AN 2008--

Source: NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF STATE LEGISLATURES (NCSL)

Pages: 50

Subject: 1. CHILD CARE. 2. EDUCATION--PRESCHOOL.

Notes: "This first Early Care and Education State Budget Actions report is a compilation of data provided by state fiscal staff gathered through a survey of the 50 states and territories on state appropriations in FY 2007 and FY 2008. Because the goal of the survey was to collect data on state appropriations, it did not survey state appropriation of federal funds. The findings do, where noted, report on federal Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF) dollars that were appropriated as authorized in federal law by transfer or direct spending on child care.

NCSL surveyed states about state appropriations to four categories of early care and education:

- Child care,
- Prekindergarten,
- Parent education and home visiting, and
- Related early learning programs."

Source: COMPLETE COLLEGE AMERICA (CCA)
Pages: 246
Subject: 1. UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES--STUDENTS.
Notes: "Report examines why students fail to earn a degree and presents policy options to improve graduation rates in all 50 states. The report argues that state governments have been slow to understand exactly how college students have changed over the years, noting that 'non-traditional' students make up 75 percent of today's postsecondary population. The report further argues that part-time students are often left completely out of the discussion since the federal government and several states fail to track their persistence and completion rates. CCA identifies several actions states can take to decrease the time it takes students to earn a degree and improve college success rates. ... In addition to policy recommendations, the report features individual state profiles that detail current gaps in completion rates." (WICHE Policy Alert)

Notes: "This edition of the Short-Term Energy Outlook is the first to include forecasts for 2013. ... The forecast of average household heating expenditures for all heating fuels has been lowered from the first forecast for the current winter published in the October 2011 Outlook, primarily as a result of the warm first half of this heating season. Average household heating oil expenditures are now expected to increase by 4 percent this winter heating season (October 1 to March 31) compared with last winter. In contrast, natural gas and propane expenditures are projected to decline by 7 percent and 1 percent, respectively, and electricity expenditures are 2 percent lower than last winter's levels."

The 2010 Report includes data from the same 87 public employee retirement systems that have been compared in the prior report. Title: COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTERS AND STATE HEALTH POLICY : A primer for policymakers (Book) --2012.

Source: NATIONAL ACADEMY FOR STATE HEALTH POLICY (NASHP)

Pages: 39

Subject: 1. HEALTH CARE. 2. INDIGENT PERSONS.

Notes: "Although the federal health center program was initiated and still is largely implemented without significant state involvement, state governments' relationships with these safety net providers have grown over the years as states have worked to increase coverage and access to quality care. This primer, which is an update to the 2008 publication, Federal Community Health Centers and State Health Policy: A Primer for Policymakers, provides an overview of community health centers and other types of Federally Qualified Health Centers and is intended to assist state policymakers in developing successful strategies to integrate health centers into state delivery systems and reform plans."
