A REGULATION relating to state personnel; revising provisions concerning employees who test positive for the presence of alcohol or a controlled substance; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel’s Digest:

Existing law provides that, with certain exceptions, an employee who consumes or is under the influence of alcohol or drugs while on duty or possesses a controlled substance while on duty is subject to disciplinary action by an appointing authority. Except in certain circumstances, existing law requires a state agency to refer to an employee assistance program an employee who: (1) tests positive for the first time in a screening test; and (2) has committed no other acts for which the employee is subject to termination during the course of conduct giving rise to the screening test. (NRS 284.4062) Existing regulations require an employee who is referred to an employee assistance program to provide certain evidence and recommendations to the appointing authority and provides that an employee who fails to provide such evidence is subject to disciplinary action. (NAC 284.892) Section 1 of this regulation authorizes an employee assistance program to provide the required evidence and recommendations to the appointing authority instead of the employee. Section 1 further provides that an employee is only subject to disciplinary action for failure to provide the required evidence if the appointing authority determines that the failure to provide the required evidence is the fault of the employee. Existing regulations require an employee who is subject to disciplinary action but is not terminated to provide to the appointing authority certain documentation from a counselor which verifies that the employee is able to return to work. (NAC 284.893) Section 2 of this regulation authorizes an employee assistance program to provide this documentation instead of the employee.
