A REGULATION relating to occupational safety; removing provisions requiring the publication of certain notices in newspapers; revising the form in which recordings of certain hearings are required to be kept; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel’s Digest:

Existing law requires the Division of Industrial Relations of the Department of Business and Industry to adopt regulations that are necessary to provide safe and healthful employment in the employments within its jurisdiction. (NRS 618.295) Existing law authorizes an affected employer to apply to the Administrator of the Division for a variance from a standard adopted by the Division relating to occupational safety and health. (NRS 618.415) Existing regulations set forth procedures governing the application for and granting of such a variance. (NAC 618.630-618.6382)

Under existing regulations, if an application for a variance is not denied because it is defective, the Administrator is required to have published in at least two daily newspapers a notice of the filing of the application. Existing regulations additionally require the Administrator, within 10 days after issuing a final decision on the application, to have the decision published in at least two daily newspapers. (NAC 618.6334) Section 1 of this regulation removes those requirements.

Existing regulations authorize an affected employer or employee to file with the Administrator a request for a hearing on an application for a variance. (NAC 618.6343) Existing regulations require such a hearing to be stenographically reported or captured as an audio recording. (NAC 618.6373) Section 2 of this regulation instead requires that a stenographic or electronic record be kept of the hearing.
