REMARKS FROM THE FLOOR

Assemblyman Paul Anderson requested that the following remarks be entered in the Journal.

ASSEMBLYMAN ELLIOT ANDERSON:

At the floor session held in the historic Assembly Chamber a couple of weeks ago, my colleague from Assembly District 1 announced the donation of a series of historical panels to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Nevada's statehood. Collectively, these panels tell the story of the Legislature's role in shaping the history of our state. The first panel was donated by former Assembly Judiciary Chairman Jason Frierson and highlighted select legislation that has gone through the Judiciary Committee.

Today it is my pleasure to donate the second panel in the series, this one highlighting the Education Committee. Among other things, you might be surprised to learn that Nevada was years ahead of Brown vs. Board of Education in ending school segregation. In 1871, attorney T.W.W. Davies II—who was later elected to represent Ormsby County (Carson City) in the Assembly—successfully argued before the Nevada Supreme Court that it was unconstitutional to exclude children from attending public school due to race or color.

When you have a minute, please take some time to learn a little bit about the contributions of legislators who served before us and enjoy the Education panel. It will be posted outside of the Education Committee room.
