(a) Both adverse and beneficial effects;

Adverse effects:

- Sec. 1: There is no adverse effect as this is an informational statement.
- Sec. 2: There is no adverse effect as this is a definition of a new physical fitness test.
- Sec. 3: There is no adverse effect as agencies are already conducting physical fitness testing and this section defines the minimum standards for the passing of these tests.
- Sec. 4: There is no adverse effect. Agency currently expense travel funds to send officers to training. This training and certificate is specific to supervisors within an agency.
- Sec. 5: There is no adverse effect as this includes the definition of “agility run” into the NAC.
- Sec. 6: There is no adverse effect as agencies already conduct employment background investigations. This amendment provides clear minimum standards for these background investigations and may have a minor financial impact not already incurred.

Sec 7: There is no adverse effect to NAC 289.200 subsections (1), (2), (3) as this has always been a requirement for certification. This just establishes what the new standards are based on a previously conducted validation study.

There is no adverse effect to the amendment of NAC 289.200 subsection 5(a)(b) as this is already a requirement and establishes more defined time requirements for passing the state physical fitness examination for basic academy students and officers eligible for reciprocity certification.

There is no adverse effect by adding a new section which defines what successful completion of a basic training program is.

Sec 8: There is no adverse effect to NAC 289.230 as this is a clerical clean up on numbering, addition of wording to have language consistent throughout this regulation and to include all areas instructed in subsection 4 as exemptions for instructors who instruct in these areas as identified by the agency administrator.

Sec 9: There is no adverse effect since most basic training programs already administer an entrance physical fitness test. This establishes what the entrance test standards are based on the recommendation from the physical fitness validation study.

Beneficial effects:

Sec. 1: This is an informational statement.

Sec. 2: This is a beneficial effect as this is a definition of a new physical fitness test and provides clear definition and standardization.

Sec. 3: This is a beneficial effect as agencies will be utilizing newly validated standardized physical fitness tests and defines the minimum standards for the passing of these tests.

Sec. 4: This is a beneficial effect as a new professional certificate for supervisors is created which establishes minimum training standards for the supervisor certificate that reflect training content designed for the new supervisor.

Sec. 5: This is a beneficial effect as this includes the definition of “agility run” into the NAC.

Sec 6: This is a beneficial effect as this provides clear minimum standards for these background investigations.

Sec 7: This is a beneficial effect to NAC 289.200 subsections (1), (2), (3) by establishing passing standard for the newly implemented statewide standardized and validated physical fitness tests. This establishes what the new standards are, based on a previously conducted validation study.

areas instructed in subsection 4 as exemptions for instructors who instruct in these areas as identified by the agency administrator.

Sec 9: There is a beneficial effect for all basic training programs by having an entrance physical fitness test.
